2. Discussion: The APD representative was interested in finding out the availability of different fuel power sources in denied areas of the world. As far as liquid fuels are concerned the consensus of opinion was:

a. For the most part the type and grade of fuel available was variable from country to country. Of course the same restrictions as regards rationing prevail in each area.

b. It was felt that kerosene was the most available fuel in many of the denied areas. This kerosene would most likely fall into two categories. That used for home consumption and that used for industrial consumption.

The opinion regarding storage batteries was that in most areas they would be difficult to obtain.

3. Actions:

b. If desired ONR can supply a detailed list, country by country, of whats available in regards to storage batteries.
